INTRODUCTION TO THE NRF

The National Research Foundation (“NRF”) is a juristic person established in terms of the National Research Foundation Act, Act 23 of 1998, and a Schedule 3A Public Entity in terms of the Public Finance Management Act.

The NRF is the government’s national agency responsible for promoting and supporting research and human capital development through funding researchers, provision of the National Research Platforms, and science outreach platforms/programs to the broader community. The NRF provides these services in all fields of science and technology, including natural science, engineering, social science, and humanities.

The NRF delivers its mandate through its internal business units which are both functional and geographical diverse. Unless specifically noted, all contracts flowing from bidding apply to all of its business units.

INTRODUCTION TO THE NZG

The NZG is a wildlife biodiversity conservation and research organisation that has a unique distinction of incorporating a living animal collection, a biomaterials bank and an annual visitorship of 600 000. Together these features give the NZG its status, and a unique character, as a national facility that (i) generates knowledge for conservation of wildlife; (ii) develops high quality human resources in the form of conservation scientists and biodiversity conservation practitioners; (iii) undertakes ex-situ conservation of wildlife and makes qualified contributions to in-situ conservation of threatened species and their habitats; (iv) serves as a science advancement platform: a place of learning and a source of inspiration to action for science and biodiversity; (v) enhances the quality of life of the community by providing a top class metropolitan ecotourism facility, a family attraction of first choice that inspires discovery, appreciation, care, knowledge and respect for nature.

The NZG's Research & Scientific Services Department contributes to scientific research through prioritized, funded, completed, disseminated and applicable (policy and management decisions) knowledge to understand biological diversity. The two driving vehicles are the Centre for Conservation Science and the Centre for Wildlife Health with the NZG Biobank. The CfCS is well placed within the conservation community to develop new and improved technologies and offer research-orientated services and quality, efficient and professional research expertise to other zoological gardens, academic institutions, conservation agencies and organizations. The CfCS has dedicated laboratories and encompasses three buildings for bioinformatics training, wildlife forensics and conservation genetics services and research. The genetics laboratories host a variety of equipment facilitating DNA and RNA extraction, PCR as well as two genetic analysers used for sequencing and microsatellites.

CONTEXT

Samples must be accurately quantified for NGS sequencing, because loading the sequencer is highly dependent on the amount of template loaded. If template is loaded at a concentration that is too low then the sequencing chemistry is not optimally used resulting in wasted expenditure and if template is loaded that has a concentration that is too high then sequencing quality deteriorates or runs fail entirely. To accurately quantify samples for loading a highly sensitive means of determining the average fragment size and a fluorometric means of nucleic acid quantification are required. Microfluidic fragment analysers are currently the preferred means for fragment analysis. These systems also assist with initial template quality control (QC) checking such as for RNA integrity and during sample preparation for sequencing samples can also be QC checked.

CONTRACT PERIOD

The purchase of the fragment analyser and warranties is once-off. A 10 year contract for the supply of chemicals and consumables and a five year maintenance plan is included.

SPECIFICATIONS FOR THE REQUIRED PROCUREMENT
