CONTEXT

The implementation of Bioinformatics-based research is a computationally intensive process. Given the increased number of projects at the NZG utilising Bioinformatics as a tool, along with the proposed strategic move to increase the number of projects dependent on this resource, it has become critical that the NZG acquire the needed resources to function optimally in this regard. The acquisition of a computer server for the analysis of data is there for a priority.

In conjunction with the acquisition of a computational resource, the NZG also requires the necessary hard disk storage space in the form of a data storage server, in order to support and enhance the utility of the computer server.

CONTRACT PERIOD

The purchase of the two computer servers and warranties is once-off.
